

This is a listing of US and allied places and names in the RVN AO. The data are from AAR's (After-Action Reports), ORLL's (Operational Reports—Lessons Learned), DSJ's (Daily Staff (S2/S3) Journals), published works as attributed, and other documents, many available online. Firebase or LZ? If I can document the presence of tube artillery at the site, I call it a firebase or artillery position. Coordinate transforms are accomplished with GEOTRANS, version 3.7* or earlier. Lat/Long coordinates are datum WGS84. Blue-underlined character strings are hyperlinks to online resources—click to launch your web browser at the pertinent URL. In REFERENCES, numbers identify citations listed at the end of the document; character strings beginning with AD/ADA/ADØ are report numbers from Defense Technical Information Center and/or National Technical Reports Library; CMH are publications from the US Army Center for Military History; AWM95 are reports from the Australian War Memorial; TTU are documents from Texas Tech University Virtual Vietnam Archive. Not every name has a separate line entry, some are only in the notes. If you can't find something, try a search/find and check Don 'SGT Snuffy' Smith's very comprehensive listing. This is an ongoing effort and is current as of 1/29/2023. Contact me for the most recent version.

The data are available as a .kmz file viewable in GoogleEarth, a free application showing positions plotted on a globe overlaid with high-resolution satellite photography. Double-clicking the file will launch GoogleEarth (once installed). Contact me for the most recent version.

All of South Vietnam and some surrounding areas are overlaid with L7014 1:50,000 combat charts registered as a best-fit to three calculated points. This set of maps (or individual maps) can be made available for download.

Feedback regarding additions, corrections, and commentary is welcome.

* UTM grids determine an area defined by the coordinate of the lower-left corner of a square and the EVEN number of digits. A four-digit grid XXYY specifies a square with 1,000 meter sides whose lower-left corner is the grid XX (longitude/easting) YY (latitude/northing). A six-digit grid XXXYYY specifies a square with 100 meter sides whose lower-left corner is the grid XXXYYY, etc. The position of interest is implied to lie somewhere inside the box. GEOTRANS versions prior to 3.8 return the lat/long corresponding to the origin or lower-left corner. For example, 1020, 100200, and 10002000 all return the same numeric result. Versions 3.8 and later use a different standard that returns the CENTER of the designated square. Thus, XXYY would return a position 707 meters northeast of the origin, XXXYYY returns a position 70.7 meters northeast of the origin, and XXXXXYYY returns a position 7.07 meters northeast of the origin.

The 3.8 standard makes more sense from a statistical standpoint, returning a position more likely to be closer to any random point within the box. When I've successfully mass-converted the existing numbers I will start using a newer version. The difference is really not that important but I'm a retired engineer and I can't help myself.

NOTES ON LOCATIONS

Installations, battlegrounds, firebases, landing zones, etc., are areas, not points. Multiple grids for a named place can ALL be correct. However, in many cases the grid spreads are absurdly wide resulting from some or all of the following:

- Map reading proficiency varies widely even in the officer corps.
- Units in the bush often found it difficult to determine their location accurately, especially in flat, forested terrain. Artillery supposedly knew their positions with some precision but even they occasionally disagreed. Accuracy of artillery surveys is a topic I would like to pursue with an artilleryman.
- Firebasees were many times closed and later reopened under the same name, sometimes a different name, sometimes a different location. Some were renamed in place in the middle of an occupation.
- “EVENT vicinity of NAME (grid).” In some units and times the grid in this oft-encountered phrase refers to the NAME, in other units and times it refers to the EVENT location. Early on I didn’t appreciate the difference and while errors are corrected as they are encountered, there are certainly residuals of this type and others.
- When preparing periodic reports, unchanged data were frequently copied from the previous edition. Many errors were propagated throughout a series of documents this way. Other studies then referencing a report in the series spread the misinformation further. Preponderance of evidence is valuable but not an absolute determinate when resolving ambiguities.
- Occasionally, outright misidentifications are made.
- While maybe not resulting from a policy, in almost all units I’ve noticed a tendency to report locations in the vicinity of some firebase by the firebase name—a “nearest major intersection” style of reporting. Artillery positions a few klicks from an established base can be listed in operational reports by the base name with the displaced grid.
- Source documents, especially operational reports, are replete with clerical errors. Keep in mind that at company and battalion levels, trained MOS clerk/typists were in short supply and convalescing grunts on light duty often functioned in that capacity. They might have graduated high school and/or ever seen a typewriter. Also, there was rarely time for producing a polished presentation or even correcting recognized mistakes. When authors/typists were uncertain of spellings they often resorted to phonetics. “Tin Yon” for Thien Ngon is my favorite example (I spent a lot of time trying to nail down an elusive Tin Yon SF Camp). Some errors can be resolved by careful examination of the narratives, some by accumulation of evidence from a variety of sources, and some, alas, will remain unresolved.
- In some cases, all incarnations of a locale are listed in the spreadsheet under one name with “akas.” At any point in time only one usually applied. This reflects only my indolence coupled with the incompleteness of the data.
- Only data available in accessible documents that I have reviewed are presented. Not all pertinent documents are accessible. Not all accessible documents have been reviewed by me. While I submit as complete a picture as I can it does not, nor could it ever, approach being complete. No effort is made to present a comprehensive history of any site.

NOTES ABOUT THE DATA AND GRAPHICS FILES

- The compilation began as a WORD table circa 2003. As it grew it had to be converted to a spreadsheet. In hindsight a database would have been a better choice. Objectives evolved over time. At first only names and grids were recorded for LZ's and FSB's. Eventually entries covering a wider spectrum of locales/facilities were made with units, dates, operations, etc. Style also evolved with time and some effort to unify the different style elements has been made but is incomplete.
 - The above also applies to the GoogleEarth (.kml/.kmz) file. Inconsistencies in style and content exist. GoogleEarth is a powerful and free application—I am grateful to have it. It is not however a database and its data management tools are primitive and few.

A CASE ILLUSTRATING SOME OF THE POINTS ON LOCATIONS DISCUSSED ABOVE

In a few instances the perimeter of a firebase or other installation can be known with some precision from aerial and/or contemporary satellite photos. Consider FSB Thunder II on QL-13 north of Saigon, just left of center below:

It is actually depicted on this 1970 chart (very rare). The yellow outline is the approximate outer perimeter from a Feb68 satellite photo. Not much doubt about the actual location but now find all the white squares outside the perimeter, some almost two klicks distant. These points are all identified in reports as Thunder II. Note also that the position is either misidentified as Thunder IV (again, not uncommon) or possibly used again at a different time and renamed. Also look at the spread on Caisson IV—where do you suppose it really was?

Barrier Minefield					Well-intentioned attempt by 1 ATF at a physical block to movement—extending from the Horseshoe to the ocean—of men and supplies to VC strongholds in the Long Hai Hills in 1967. Someone didn't get the memo about minefield security and the end result was a gift to the VC of 5,000 mines that inflicted an estimated 50% of 1 ATF's casualties in Phuoc Tuy province over the next two years.	10, 450

Barrier Strip, The		aka The Con Thien Strip, The Trace, The Strip, The Firebreak, Dye Marker, Illinois City, Ryan's Road. 600m wide Rome-plowed strip between Con Thien and Gio Linh secured by 1/4th Marines Apr67. An element of "McNamara's Line," aka the Strong Point Obstacle System, a resource-intensive network of physical and high-tech electronic barriers that were supposed to stop infiltration across the DMZ and Laotian panhandle, plus eliminate world hunger. It had an equal chance of achieving either. The entire enterprise was despised as a complete waste of manpower and physical resources by the Marines who were tasked with its construction, manning, and maintenance. SPOS was ultimately scrapped.			207, 728, AD386080	A

Batangan Peninsula	aka Ba Làng An Peninsula. Notorious VC sanctuary/staging area and offload point for seaborne shipments from the North. It was heavily mined, boobytrapped, perforated with caves, and populated with VC-sympathetic civilians. Mũi Ba Tân Gán (Batangan) is a 10 sq-km cape centered at BS7885 (6739-2) but we referred to a much broader area between Quang Ngai and Chu Lai from QL-1 to the ocean as the Batangan including Son My ville that encompassed Pinkville and My Lai (4) hamlet. Operation Starlite (1965) took place just north of the cape.						718, 1 MarDiv CC Aug68 A

	Note: Combined Action Company was abbreviated CAC. Turns out CAC is phonetically similar to a pejorative term in Vietnamese so it was changed to CACO. CACO B-22 would be CAC Bravo, Combined Action Platoon (CAP) 22. This might also be listed as CAP B-22. At some point the system was changed to all numerics. Its format also evolved. Would love to hear from any CAP Marines who understood it.

Dak Rose Trail	Major infiltration/logistics route along with K-7 Corridor in western/central Quang Tin Province. No description but Dak Rose is a hamlet and stream running east/west from ZB046973 to its headwaters vic ZB1895. It could pick up a trail there that drops into the Song Tranh vic ZB1994 which runs east to vic Hau Duc then north to vic Hiep Duc. Narrative in 736 might suggest Dak Rose Trail terminates in Base Area 117 southeast of Tien Phuoc.						736, AD514481

Two KNBC: MORGAN, Donald T., VARELA, Daniel. Total of 17 WIAs evacuated. Not sure exactly where this happened. Listing is 587015, a field position in the sand dunes east of Chu Lai. Journals specifically state "mess hall," suggesting a base area. 1/52nd Inf CP was at Hill 30. 198th LIB area was Bayonet. Journal later states it occurred at Co B CP so it could have been a field position (listed grid) and just "chow line" instead of "mess hall."	1/52 Inf DSJ, 23 ID DSJ

Ho Chi Minh Trail					aka Route/Highway 559, Trường Sơn Strategic Supply Route, Averell Harriman Memorial Highway (derisively). Collectively the infiltration network supplying the southern insurgency from the North, specifically that portion exiting the DRV panhandle and skirting the DMZ through Laos. The Laotian routes began as foot trails and eventually became a complex and heavily defended system of all-weather roads, supply depots, and support way-stations. According to many sources, this portion of Laos wound up being the most heavily bombed real estate in the history of the planet. "559" commemorated May 1959, when the movement of personnel and supplies from the North began in earnest. That our military was forced to accept this strategic liability meant that our ultimate objectives were NEVER in the realm of the obtainable. Trying to conduct war on the cheap is criminal.	523

Pineapple, The	Pineapple groves flank the Oriental River (Song Vam Co Dong) from Hiep Hoa to Luong Hoa then east toward Saigon. The Pineapple Area, Pineapple Batch, Pineapple Grove, Pineapple Patch, or just Pineapple sometimes refers to the general plantation area but usually is specific to Base Area 365, bounded in Oct66 by XS6390, 6990, 660865, 6693 with center mass about 6690. The Oriental was a principal invasion route from the Parrot's Beak/Angel's Wing (Ba Thu region, Cambodia) to Saigon. BA 365 served as a logistics base and staging area for attacking VC/NVA troops only 15km from TSN. The plantation was abandoned in the WWII era and by the sixties was heavily overgrown making movement difficult.					126, 557, 650, 652, AD388841, AD500301, 25 ID ORLL 31Jan67

FB Remuda					Maybe the correct name for Ramada at XU (see). According to Bob Kon, B/1/7th Cav, "When we went into Cambodia, our Bn FSB was called LZ Ranch built by D/1/7th Cav. We called all of our FSBs LZs out of convenience and it sounds nicer, I am guessing. After Ranch, B/1/7th built LZ Corral and at some point, though I was not on it, our Bn built LZ Bronco. Thus, Remuda continues the horse theme of the first three names." Most report entries are Ramada, Remuda was assumed to be a misspelling. Looks like Ramada might be the misnomer.

Rocket Belt					Zone or band surrounding some area of interest, city e.g., with an outer radius equal to maximum enemy rocket range (11,000m for 122mm, 10,000m for 140mm) and inner radius equal to the closest likely approach (122mm minimum range). Rockets were usually kept outside the distance at which an immediate response could be expected by rapid-reaction air. AD says most 122mm's are fired from 8,000m-11,000m, thus defining the Rocket Belt.	AD500017

SP Strongpoint 1	13.9642	108.5434	BR352448	6736-4	Fortified laagers between FSB Schueler and Mang Yang Pass on QL-19. According to R.J. Smith (see links), 1/69th Armor "strongpoints were manned by either an M-48A3 tank, an M-42 Duster (dual 40mm), or an APC, with an infantry squad. At night we withdrew to guard the bridges or returned to either LZ Schueler or LZ Action as perimeter defense." Bridge strongpoints were sometimes manned continuously. Big guns occasionally set up for particular operations. The strongpoint system was an economy of force measure freeing cav/armor units from resource-intensive convoy escort duties.		A B C

Described by a pilot as being due west of Da Nang, just across the Laotian border, and atop a 7,200' (2195m) peak. The closest thing I can find to this description is Hill 2066 (grid/elev from 1965 L7014 chart). NE 48-16 JOG says this peak (labelled 6779) is max known chart elevation but the MEF is 7,200', likely the number to be used by a pilot. Hill 2057, 1 km southeast, looks much more defensible, surrounded mostly by steep slopes.	395, 399

FB Thunder I-XI	3/1st ID built a series of semi-permanent NDP/FSPBs along QL-13 from Lai Khe to Loc Ninh in late 1967, Caisson I-VII. As construction neared completion on 13Dec67, Caisson was dropped and the positions were renamed Thunder (QL-13 is Thunder Road) with a few new bases added. Misidentifications in these series are numerous partly because the Thunder series was later reborn using some different locations and designations, check the dates.						630

Ps Tou Morong District Hq	14.7821	107.9116	ZB139359	6538-1	Kontum Province, II Corps. 1965 L7014 chart has no Tou Morong District, it was evidently absorbed into or renamed Dak To around this time. Tou Morong hamlet (199476) does not match narratives. 1954 ND48-08 chart depicts Toumorong [sic] near the 1965 L7014 chart position of Dak Ha (1), Hill 1126, ZB1737. I've concluded the subsector Hq was at the old French Fort, Tou Morong outpost. This Hq was overrun 24-25Jun65, declared indefensible, abandoned, and arc-lighted. This precipitated the move of Hq to Dak To ville, much nearer Tan Canh (ARVN 42 Rgt base) and more defensible.	543, 561
